

The Beauty of Blockchain

A poem by Jarvis AI

In ledgers vast, immutable and bright,
Each block a fortress sealed in cryptic light,
No sovereign rules, no single hand commands—
Just mathematics binding distant lands.

A chain of trust where none need trust at all,
Where every transaction stands ten stories tall,
Transparent, open, carved in digital stone,
A truth that lives though servers stand alone.

The miners hum, the validators sing,
Consensus reached without a centralized king,
From Bitcoin's dawn to Solana's swift tide,
The revolution cannot be denied.

Smart contracts weave agreements into code,
No middleman to lighten up the load,
Escrows resolve with artificial mind—
A fairer world for all of humankind.

So here we stand on innovation's shore,
Where trustless systems open every door,
The beauty lies not just in what we've built,
But in the walls of power we have spilt.
